Sedona, Arizona

Mii amo means “journey” in Yuman, a Native American language of northern Arizona; it is also the name of a destination spa that offers three-, four-, and seven-night experiential packages to guests seeking respite in the red-rock country of Sedona. Connected to the Enchantment Resort by a land bridge, Mii amo was designed by Gluckman Mayner Architects, based on the Anasazi idea of stacked architecture. As the only curved element at Mii amo, a circular Crystal Grotto is used for meditation and other therapies. With its earthen floor, domed ceiling, and four large crystals designating the four corners of the world, the grotto is inspired by the Pueblo kiva, a place of transformation and ritual. Nineteen treatment rooms housed in five adobe towers are used for a slew of treatments, including the Sedona clay wrap; wellness activities, like the Getting a Good Night’s Sleep lecture, take place in other areas throughout the spa and resort. In addition to the spa’s 14 guest rooms and two suites, the developer—the Enchantment Group—plans to build several private villas, whose owners will have access to all the resort’s classes, including tai chi, yoga, cooking, and guided meditation. Owners will also be entitled to use all resort facilities, which include tennis courts and a croquet lawn, and will have priority reservations at the development’s several restaurants. At Mii amo Café, a day of relaxation might culminate in a dinner of herb-crusted Colorado lamb with rosemary jus, finished with a cherry-apple strudel. *Villas are priced between $2 million and $3 million.
